

Northern California/Nevada + Southern California Chapters present:

Dr. Joanne Culverhouse, Superintendent, La Habra City SD

Michelle Barlow, Facilities Director, Claremont McKenna College

Dr. Gordon Amerson, Superintendent, Duarte Unified SD

Dr. Lee Heffernan, Literacy Teacher, MCCSC

John Miller, Teacher, King City Public Schools

Your image here

Bruce Duncan, Director of Innovation, Burlingame SD

Jessica Morgan, Executive Director, Bullis Charter

Chris McNutt, Educator, Global Impact STEM Academy

Janet Kliegl, Educational Planner, CFM

A Virtual Wake-Up Call

COVID-19 has magnified the inequities in our schools and challenged us to fit the square peg of traditional teaching modes into the round hole of remote learning, hybrid classrooms, and social distancing.

Come interact and share with innovative education leaders in California and across the U.S. who are stepping up to the challenge: to identify and use positive lessons of 2020-21
that cast a new light on the question:
“just what are our schools good for, anyway?”

PART ONE

*April 20, 2021
3:30 - 5 p.m.*

PART TWO

*May 4, 2021
3:30 - 5 p.m.*

Learning Objectives

1. Understand how schools serving a variety of age and socio-economic groups have positioned themselves to thrive in spite of the Pandemic
2. Build your own toolkit of strategies through Interaction with peers to explore the future form of the resilient educational environment
3. See how a building a community and personalizing the learning experience through virtual and in-person techniques will enhance learning beyond the status quo
4. Explore how school design may change to accommodate the new learning experience